A man with grey hair, wearing a dark jacket, is seated and playing a large pipe organ. He is looking down at the keys. The organ has a large wooden console and a tall, ornate case with a clock face. The setting appears to be a church interior with wooden paneling.

Departing from Place Saint-Léger, the little train will take you on a tour of the discreet and enchanting charm of the old town of the Cité des Ducs, which has preserved its unique architectural and medieval heritage.

Add a musical touch to your visit with a 15-minute concert by the Grand Carillon of Chambéry. With its 70 bells, this carillon is the largest in Europe. Its homogeneous timbre and innovative carbon-fiber mechanism give it a personality and richness of sound that are unique in the world.

A photograph of a formal dinner table. In the foreground, a white plate holds a gourmet dish with various components, including what appears to be a piece of meat, vegetables, and a garnish. To the right of the plate, a fork, knife, and spoon are neatly arranged. A white napkin is folded to the right of the cutlery. In the background, several glasses are visible, including a tall wine glass and a shorter water glass. The setting is a dimly lit restaurant with warm lighting and a blurred background showing other tables and chairs.

Completely renovated, the Musée Savoisien, the departmental museum of the history and cultures of Savoie, is a unique place. Over 2,000 objects from the Palaeolithic to the present day are on display. A journey with a guide through the geopolitical, cultural, social and economic history of Savoie.
